CONTINUED UNFAVORABLE weather has caused an advance in the produce markets of England.

NEW YORK theatrical managers have resolved to close their theatres should the President die, and not reopen until after the obsequies.

ON SATURDAY the Queen prorogued Parliament in one of her usual speeches which showed that she was not dissatisfied with herself nor with the world.

THERE MUST be lots of money in the treasury of Luzerne County, Pa. There are thirty known candidates for treasurer, and the whole county has not yet been heard from.

IN LONDON, on Saturday, the critical condition of the President absorbed all popular attention. People thought his death would be a calamity to the United States and a grave misfortune to England.

GOVERNOR HAWKINS, of Tennessee, on Saturday, sent a circular letter to the governors of the states and territories, suggesting that in the case of the President's death, regular business be suspended on the day of the funeral, and that memorial services be held in the several churches.

ON SATURDAY a union meeting of prayer for the recovery of the President was held at Vermont Avenue Christian Church, Washington, when it was agreed to recommend that sister churches at the capital and throughout the country should observe Sunday, 26th, as a day of humiliation and prayer. The President's family approved of the recommendation.

THE DISPATCHES from Washington and elsewhere concerning the President furnish highly entertaining reading. The HERALD, realizing the anxiety of the public to have as full reports as could be obtained, devotes a large share of its news columns this morning to the publication of the interesting story, which includes the news of Saturday night after the Sunday issue had gone to press, of Sunday, of Monday, and up to a late hour this morning. No paper in the west has more full or better reports concerning the distinguished patient than the HERALD contains to-day.

THE POPULATION of England appears to be much the same now as when Carlyle wrote something that has since become familiar to the world about fools. It is said that Bradlaugh is besieged by people anxious to buy the coat that was torn in his disgraceful and foolish row with the police when he wanted to override the authority of parliament by forcing himself into the House of Commons despite an order against it. One of the class to which Carlyle referred has offered £20 for the torn garment, and another's foolishness has led him to offer £10, while a third suggests that the article be raffled for. Bradlaugh himself seems as foolish as the others, or he would take this opportunity of selling his old coat for enough to buy half a dozen new ones; but he clings to the old rag, and says those who tore it will be made to sew it up. How an Englishman can find anything to excite sentiment in an old, torn coat, is hard to understand.

THE PRESIDENT.

These news of the President's death have again dispelled the gloom that shrouded the White House and spread over the land. The night change for the better noted in the case of the President seems to have been another decided turning point with him, for from rapidly sinking into the grave, he is now again progressing towards recovery, and at a satisfactory rate. The telegrams from Washington telling of the changed condition of the patient seem almost too good to be true, in view of the dismal reports of last week, when everybody expected the next day's dispatches to convey the sad intelligence of the President's death. Of course, the patient is not yet well, and at best cannot reasonably hope for recovery for weeks or perhaps months to come; but he has to all appearances fairly started on the road to convalescence. It is wonderful how much the man is loved as evidenced by the effect of his reported condition upon the public. Last Friday and Saturday the people all over the continent were downhearted and depressed in spirit to a degree to which they have never before been brought, and yesterday all were bright and cheerful. To day promises to intensify this cheerfulness, our latest reports being of a highly favorable character.

Careless Orchestral Concert.

Another of those treats so much enjoyed by the Salt Lake public—a concert by the Careless Orchestra—is to be given at the Theatre next Monday evening, and on this occasion the performance of the orchestra, that has before won so many encomiums, will be augmented by the appearance of a select chorus, which has also been under the training of Prof. Careless. The vocal solo features of the evening will be given by Mrs. Careless and Mr. B. B. Young, while a gem on the piano will be rendered by Prof. Krouse—a professor of much renown and ability on this grand instrument. The programme will be immediately published, and although so short a time is given to publishing the announcement of the performance ere it will be presented, there is no doubt that the news will quickly spread and the orchestra receive the large patronage of music loving people that these performances always deserve.

No Good Preaching.

No man can do a good job of work, preach a good sermon, try a law suit well, doctor a patient, or write a good article when he feels miserable and dull, with sluggish brain and unsteady nerves, and none should make the attempt in such a condition when it can be so easily and cheaply removed by a little Hop Bitters.
